The Pentax K1000 (originally marked the Asahi Pentax K1000) is an interchangeable lens, 35 mm film, single-lens reflex (SLR) camera, manufactured by Asahi Optical Co., Ltd. from 1976 to 1997, originally in Japan. The K1000's extraordinary longevity makes it a historically significant camera. The K1000's inexpensive simplicity was a great virtue and earned it an unrivaled popularity as a basic ...

The LTL is a fully manual 35mm SLR, which used a battery only for its exposure measuring circuit. In construction the camera is uninspiring and rather box like, but has a reputation for reliability and toughness. The fact that this example is still working perfectly after about 45 years is testament to that. Praktica LTL 35mm SLR

, a very typical fully-manual SLR camera.]] Fully-manual cameras will require you to set both aperture and shutter speed yourself. Most of these will have a match-needle meter in the viewfinder which will indicate either over- or under-exposure; if the needle goes above the middle mark your photo will be over-exposed, and if it goes below it ...

A late model to market, many consider this camera to be Nikon's manual film SLR swansong and they went out on a very high note. Nikon took all that was good about the famous Nikon FE and FM series and combined it into one camera. I prefer the meter needle to a digital readout of the F3 and FA as well.
