Battle of Killiecrankie 1689: The Last Act of the Killing ...

The Battle of Killiecrankie (Scottish Gaelic - Cath Raon Ruairidh) was fought between Highland Scottish clans supporting King James VII of Scotland (also known as James II of England) and troops supporting King William of Orange on 27 July 1689, during the first Jacobite uprising. Although it was a stunning victory for the Jacobites, it had little overall effect on the outcome of the war and left their leader dead.

Killiecrankie. To men such as John Graham, Viscount Dundee (formerly plain Graham of Claverhouse - the 'Bluidy Clavers' of the Covenanters), James's deposition was an outrage. Dundee took to the hills, managing to raise some of the clans, but otherwise finding little support. A government army under General Hugh Mackay, who was a Highlander himself, marched against him, but at Killiecrankie in 1689 it all went wrong, for both sides.

1689 - Battle of Killiecrankie

The Battle of Killiecrankie. July 27, 1689. In 1689, after William of Orange (William III) had landed on the shores of England ousting King James II from the dual thrones of England and Scotland, the Scottish Highland clans were to a great extent sympathetic to their former King. When John Graham of Claverhouse and Viscount Dundee ("Bluidy Clavers" to his enemies; "Bonnie Dundee" to his supporters) raised the Royal standard for King James II, most of the Highland Chiefs joined this ...
