Stratified higher education systems mirror and reproduce social hierarchies. Though participation is growing everywhere, the top universities are captured by the upper middle class, the group with the most global options. At the same time, the culpability of WCUs for inequality should be kept in proportion.

The new politics of higher education and inequality

The breakdown by age gives us a view into the future: as the inequality is lower among today's younger generations, we can expect the decline of inequality to continue in the future. Thus, further reductions in education inequality are still to be expected within developing countries; and if the expansion of global education can be continued, we can speed up this important process of global convergence.
