Grayson by Lynne Cox: Summary and reviews

In May 1992, Lynne Cox swam in the Andean Lake Titicaca, which, at 3,812 m (12,507 feet) elevation, is considered the world's highest navigable lake. While Titicaca's water, at 13-14 ° C (56-58 ° F), is warmer than that of the Bering Strait, the high elevation and unidentified biting creatures offered an unusual challenge.
