"How Trade Keeps America Great" Frederick W. Smith, FedEx Corporation National Competitiveness Forum - Dec. 9, 2016 Let me first congratulate President-elect Trump and Vice President-elect Pence. The caliber of cabinet nominees to date is reassuring given the many major economic challenges the United States faces today:

"How Trade Keeps America Great"

Trade is critical to America's prosperity - fueling economic growth, supporting good jobs at home, raising living standards and helping Americans provide for their families with affordable goods and services. In 2017, the U.S. was the world's largest goods and services trading nation, with exports of goods and services totaling $2.35 trillion. □ U.S. goods and services trade (exports plus imports) totaled $5.3 trillion during 2017, up 6.5% ($321 billion) from 2016, and up 31% from 2007.

Benefits of Trade | United States Trade Representative

First, trade is good for—and absolutely essential to—American prosperity. Trade is a two-way street, in which both imports and exports are vital. Keep in mind that the U.S. exports goods and services. In 2015, the U.S. exported more than $750 billion in services. (Census Bureau) We also import products from other countries.
