To dehumanize, therefore, is nothing more or less than a refusal to acknowledge the human essence of others, despite their obvious human form. To dehumanize people is always to demote them in a presupposed natural hierarchy. As Smith convincingly illustrates, the dynamic, even chaotic, vision of the natural world produced by the nineteenth-century Darwinian revolution has failed to loosen our intellectual attachment to the Great Chain of Being—a conception of nature as a stable and ...

For example, we say less than six weeks, not fewer than six weeks, because we are not referring to six individual weeks, but to a single period of time lasting six weeks. Some people get "really roused up" about the misuse of less or fewer, she says, and words that describe quantity, degree or amount seem to perplex people.

Society plays a key role in reducing plastic. If we all use less plastic, there will be less plastic. 4. It will outlive you, your kids, their kids... This is a hard reason to stretch out. There's not much to it. If we use less plastic, we might just feel less guilty about what we leave for the next generations.

7 Reasons Why You Should Use Less Plastic - Society19 UK

We are all potential dehumanizers, just as we are all potential objects of dehumanization. The problem of dehumanization is everyone's problem. Less Than Human is the first book to illuminate precisely how and why we sometimes think of others as subhuman creatures. It draws on a rich mix of history, evolutionary psychology, biology, anthropology, and philosophy to document the pervasiveness of dehumanization, describe its forms, and explain why we so often resort to it.
