Buildings are often built as a result of proactive policymaking that seeks to endow a city with facilities, especially cultural ones, and by extension, to leave a tangible trace of a government or a personality for future generations. For example, the "great public works projects," a series of monuments constructed during François Mitterrand's presidency, are more than just a reflection of France's cultural policies in the 1980s; they also project an image of a "builder president ...
