The Crimean nexus goes on to discuss the 'Agreement on the settlement of crisis in Ukraine', which was signed on 21 February 2014 by Viktor Yanukovich, the president of Ukraine, and three opposition leaders, and was witnessed by the EU. The agreement was instantly violated by the opposition, but the EU would not criticize it because that would have pleased Moscow.

It was released after Russia annexed Crimea in 2014. From their havens in Washington, the think tank desk warriors, still “marooned in the Cold War” in Mark Danner’s useful phrase, urged the U.S. to get tough and send “defensive” weapons to Ukraine, adding “The West has the capacity to stop Russia. The question is whether it has the will,” echoing all those valiant home front fighters past and present whose counsel and misinformation resulted in the deaths of some 100,000 ...
