The Crusades feature in contemporary western culture as perhaps the most prominent surviving image of medievalism, in western societies given fresh recognition by the vogue for pseudo-medieval fantasy ( from Tolkien to Game of Thrones) as well as by recent geo-political adventurism in the Near East. In western Asia, ever since Napoleon Bonaparte's grandiose quixotic invasion of Egypt in 1798, the Crusades have provided a symbol and precedent for indigenous resistance to foreign intrusion . . .

Crusades, military expeditions, beginning in the late 11th century, that were organized by western European Christians in response to centuries of Muslim wars of expansion. Their objectives were to check the spread of Islam, to retake control of the Holy Land in the eastern Mediterranean, to conquer pagan areas, and to recapture formerly Christian territories; they were seen by many of their participants as a means of redemption and expiation for sins.

About the Lecture: Professor Madigan explains what the Crusades were and explores how Crusaders viewed themselves as pilgrims on an armed expedition undertaken for Christ, authorized by the Pope, who were given full remission of their sins. He also traces the historiography of the Crusades in the 19th and 20th centuries to lay context for decision of the Holy Cross student body in 1925 to adopt Crusaders as their moniker.
