The Curfew Jesse Ball

My 7th Jesse Ball novel, and yet another wonderful book. The Curfew opens with William Drysdale, twenty-nine, once-violinist, at present, epitaphorist, and his daughter, Molly, eight, schoolchild. William's current job is to write the epitaphs for grave stones, in consultation with the bereaved (and sometimes with them). There will be no magic, whatsoever.

William and Molly lead a life of small pleasures, riddles at the kitchen table, and games of string and orange peels. All around them a city rages with war. When the uprising began, William's wife was taken, leaving him alone with their young daughter. They keep their heads down and try to remain unnoticed as police patrol the streets, enforcing a curfew and arresting citizens.

The Curfew. The origins of the shadowy totalitarian forces lurking around many corners of Jesse Ball's The Curfew are left purposefully vague. The novel is probably set in Chicago, but it doesn't matter. William Drysdale, the book's protagonist, has a daughter, Molly, who doesn't speak.
